Ask Views on Location for Junior High School

This important issue now three years behind needs of community and residents should send a reply to School Board or Principal Swenson.

A form letter is going out from the principal's office of the Point Loma High school to all parents in the district to ascertain the reaction of residents of this area as to the proper location of the proposed new Junior High School to be built in the next couple of years.

The Collier park addition selected as the site, has to be submitted on the next ballot. It seems the ideal location. However, the response to the letters will perhaps change the whole matter. It is asked that written replies to these letters be made in as many cases as it is possible.

Following is Principal Clarence Swenson's letter and Ocean Beach residents are urged to write him or the School Board in regard to a suitable location for a Junior High or high school.

TO PARENTS AND PATRONS OF POINT LOMA JUNIOR-SENIOR HIGH SCHOOL GREETINGS:

"At the suggestion of Superintendent of Schools Will C. Crawford I am writing to the parents of each and every one of the 1285 students now registered at Point Loma High school. As you are doubtless aware, the facilities of the school are taxed to the limit to take care of this rapidly increasing pupil load. Despite the fact that a four room shop addition was built last year and a four(or possibly eight) classroom addition will be built during this school year, at the present rate of growth it will be necessary to consider the building of at least the first wing of a new Junior High school in this district within the next few years. When the new eight classroom addition has been built and the proposed gymnasium unit(for which, by the way, Federal Funds have recently been requested through the WPA program) the limit of expansion upon the present grounds will have been reached.

"An important problem facing school authorities in connection with the expansion of secondary school facilities in the Point Loma area, (which embraces "Old Town", the western slope of Mission Hills, "Middletown" to State and Laurel Sts., Loma Portal, La Playa, Sunset Cliffs, Ocean Beach and part of Mission Beach) is the problem of determining where the new Junior High school should be located. A reasonably level site of at least 10 acres near the center of school population of the district will be necessary.

"One site has been proposed which will cost the taxpayer nothing and is located in the northeastern portion of Collier Park, an undeveloped city park property about three quarters of a mile northwest of Point Loma High school toward Mission Beach. A winding road runs from Voltaire St., north past the ball park and through Collier Park to a built up section known as Montalvo. Some grading would be necessary to level off the top of the rising ground in the center of the proposed site. The Ocean Beach-La Jolla car line runs four blocks north parallel to the location. A city election would be necessary to transfer this portion of Collier Park to the jurisdiction of the Board of Education. If the citizens of this district wish this land for their new Junior High School the issue should be placed on the ballot in a spring election.

"There may be other sites within the Point Loma area which would be preferred by some of our patrons, although there are no others as far as we know which could be secured without expense to the taxpayers. In order to discover your own personal ideas on the problem we would greatly appreciate your answering the questions listed below, sign your name and address, check the subdivision in which you live, and return this letter by your son or daughter or by mail to the school. Your frank comments and suggestions will be greatly appreciated.

Cordially and sincerely yours,
Clarence R. Swenson, Principal

City Appropriates Cash For Building Here

Among projects for which appropriations were ordered Tuesday by the city council were $2484 for a combination comfort station, lifeguard and police substation at Ocean Beach; $1115 for a water main installation on Rosecrans st. between Quimby and Lytton sts.

Approval by the WPA of the proposed fishing pier at Ocean Beach is being held up pending the financing of the sponsor's share of $54,319 of the $211,667 project, the council was informed. Under original plans, the city and county were to raise one-fourth of the amount each, with property owners in the vicinity bonding their property for the remainder. With these plans seemingly in permanent abeyance, the council is studying new ways and means of raising the money. Councilmen declared they did not see how the city could raise the whole amount from tax funds, at least in the present year.

Whitney Fire Loss $2,000,000

San Diego's most disastrous fire occured early Wednesday morning when the popular Whitney store suffered a fire loss now estimated at $2,000,000. The adjoining Dollar store report a loss from fire and water of $500,000. The Lion Clothing Co. and others in the same block were not damaged by fire but possibly some by smoke.

The 6th street side of Whitney's as well as the 5th street section appear to be almost a total loss. The Broadway section missed the worst of the holocaust and will be the only part able to be reopened.

Guilford Whitney, manager, reports immediate plans to rebuild and is showing the 250 employees splendid consideration in announcing that they will be continued on half pay until he is ready for their employment again.

Fishing Pier Subject at Forum Tuesday

"What About a Fishing Pier for Ocean Beach?" will be discussed thoroughly at the social-civic forum to be held next Tuesday evening, October 27, at Ocean Beach school.

Several officials from the city and government are expected to be on hand to tell what steps are necessary to secure the project and state why plans previously have not been carried out.

Everyone interested is invited to attend.

Large New Store Building on Voltaire

Sam Goldberg of 4956 Voltaire street has now under construction a store building with fifty foot frontage and forty-five feet deep that will be a fine addition to the business section growing so rapidly on Voltaire St.

This new structure is being built in a very substantial manner with a view of putting another story above the present store room.

Just who will occupy the new building is not for publication at the present time but will no doubt be announced in our next issue.

"PAPA, SAVE ME"— CRIES VOTER

Chicago, Oct. 16.—Norman Thomas, today, conceded the re-election of President Roosevelt. "Not because I wish it," said the Socialist candidate for the same office, "but because the people are going to vote for him. All Roosevelt has to say is 'Remember Hoover' and the voter cries, 'Papa, save me'."

A TALK ON AMENDMENTS

Next Wednesday evening a union meeting of the Methodist and Baptist churches will meet in the Baptist church to discuss the Amendments on the ballot. A prominent lawyer from La Jolla and San Diego will give an impartial view on each amendment.

Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Harte, 3559 Oliphant street, expect to leave soon for Shandon, San Luis Obispo county, where they may make their future home. Mr. Harte has many relatives there and formerly resided in that section.

Mr. and Mrs. I. J. Claspill returned last Sunday evening from their vacation trip over into Arizona. They also made their first visit to the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, whose immensity they thoroughly enjoyed. On the return journey strong winds and dust storms were encountered with rain as they neared California. Mrs. Ethel Dougherty conducted the Claspill store while the owners were absent.

Visitor Says Ocean Beach Has Much Improvement

Ocean Beach,
San Diego, Calif.

Ocean Beach News:

Three years ago I visited Ocean Beach and found things very, very shabby; houses needing paint, automobiles of ancient vintage everywhere, automobile salesmen ready for the bread line. An air of "what is the use" in the whole atmosphere.

I return this year—is it possible it is the same place? Building everywhere, I drove all around, high on the hills, what lovely new homes and in front of each one, or nearly every one, a new car if you please! I rub my eyes to make sure I am in Ocean Beach. I decided to stay a while, and so called to see if I could have the same woman work for me; that I had on my other visit. But she cheerfully informed me that she did'nt have to work any more, as her husband had a good position.

I called on a friend who on my last visit was feeling very low as she thought she would lose her home. But a government home loan fixed that, cutting her payments in half, making her feel happy and secure.

Is it possible a few years has made this marvelous change in the morale of a nation. For what is going on here is happening everywhere.

This is not a political article; as I belong to no party, I vote where I please. I merely give thanks for the recovery of a nation; long may we prosper!

Every time I come here; I wish some one had planted more of those beautiful pepper trees, one long avenue of them, would look beautiful!

Sincerely yours
Ann Toner.

Fifteen La Jollans Visit Ocean Beach Kiwanis

The twenty-four amendments on the November ballot were explained to local Kiwanians by George Stephan, president of the La Jolla club and retired attorney, questions being asked and a great deal of valuable information given those present who were most interested.

The speaker in beginning his remarks said that in his opinion it was the duty of the legislators to solve many of these problems they were putting up to the voters but lacking the courage to enact some laws, or some special group or community wanting special privileges, had this way of having their wishes granted. He said unless a person was well informed and sure the special laws enacted were good for the people of the state as a whole, it would be best to vote against the proposals thereby making less governing bodies and making no more additions to our state constitution.

Frank B. McElwee, president-elect was chairman for the day, and in addition to fifteen visiting Kiwanians from the La Jolla club, several members brought guests from our own community.

Ellsworth Whalen and Douglas Hubbs were home from Atascadero College, last week end. Ellsworth came down to see his father who was returned to Navy hospital for treatment and Doug enjoyed a visit with his home folks.

Harry E. Willis, publisher the Progress-Journal of the Hillcrest district, in his issue of August 21, 1936, has the following sincere appraisal for Edgar F. Hastings, candidate for re-election as supervisor in District No. 1.

"A DEPENDABLE OFFICER"

EDGAR F. HASTINGS
Chairman of the Board of Supervisors

"Having known Edgar F. Hastings and his wife and two daughters intimately for nearly fifteen years, it is an extreme pleasure for this writer to pay him tribute at this time when when several candidates are aspiring for his place on the board of county supervisors.

"Ed Hastings is a native Californian and has been a citizen of San Diego for thirty-six years. His mother, Mrs. Emily Hastings, now 92 years of age, also lives in San Diego in her home at 2679 Newton avenue. Ed has been a Class A building contractor in San Diego since 1907 and constructed over a million dollars' worth of buildings for San Diegans before being elected to the county board seven years ago, since which election he has given all his time to his county work.

"For four years prior to his election as supervisor he was a member of the Board of Education, the last year its president. Three of the four years he served as chairman of the building and grounds committee during which time several of San Diego's finest school structures were erected.

"During his term of office this newspaper has published many accounts of his important work on the board of supervisors. He has always led his colleagues on the board in support of projects good for San Diego county as a whole and his district in particular, and if returned to office can surely be depended upon to follow the same constructive path.

"Most folks realize that during a political campaign, when several candidates are aspiring to some particular public office, statements are sometimes made in the press and at public gatherings that never would have been expressed, nor even thought of, at any other time.

"Edgar Hastings has been a good citizen; he's been a good public officer. He is honest, sincere, trustworthy and aggressive. He is familiar with all branches of county government. Is there any candidate opposing him better qualified to conduct the county affairs than he?

"Here's to Ed Hastings! May we have more men like him serving us in public.—Editor Progress-Journal."

Senator Borah Maintains Independent Attitude

SENATOR WILLIAM E. BORAH of Idaho, whose attitude in the Presidential campaign is a matter of great interest to all parties, has declared he would confine his attention to state matters; but then, being irked by some criticism from Republicans he went further and said he was "going after the Republican party." The veteran said he had been accused of not being regular.

Senator Borah

"Well, what is a regular?" he asked. "A regular is a man with no ideas, who waits for someone to tell him what to do. My idea of being regular is in doing what you believe to be right in the interests of the people you represent.

"Let this be understood—I'm telling all parties, Republican, Democratic, Union—I'm going to advocate the things I believe in whether they cross party lines or not."

Pessimism Prevails at Last League Session

PESSIMISM and discontent marked the final session of the League of Nations assembly, the leaders admitting that little had been accomplished. Carlos Saavedra Lamas of Argentina, president of the assembly, even asked if he might not raise the question whether "civilization is on the verge of a final breakup."

The question of reforming the league covenant provoked a bitter controversy on whether nonmember states should be consulted. Russia was understood to be anxious particularly to bar German influence and achieved a minor triumph since no definite action to solicit nonmember co-operation was taken. A committee of twenty-eight was named to study reform proposals.

The assembly approved reports of its economic and disarmament committees. The economic report carried a British proposal to create a comission to study accessibility of raw materials. The United States and other nonmembers would be invited to participate. The report of the disarmament committee approved the reconvening of the world disarmament conference at an early date.

Disorders in Palestine Are Dropped by the Arabs

ARABS of Palestine, who had been on "strike" for 175 days in protest against unrestricted immigration of Jews, were persuaded by the British to call off the strike, which had been accompanied by great disorders and the killing of several hundred persons. The Arab high committee issued an appeal to Arabs throughout the country to return to work quietly, and this command was obeyed generally. Sir Arthur Wauchope, British high commissioner, was said to have informed the British government that it was now safe for the royal commission of investigation to begin its work of inquiring into the grievances of the Arabs.

According to a Hebrew newspaper of Jerusalem, the Arabs have arranged for backing by Italian Fascists for their aspirations. Also, the Moslem authority administering Islamic church property is reported to be prepared to sell Catholics a Christian holy place on Mount Zion.

Austria Private Armies Forced to Dissolve

KURT SCHUSCHNIGG,, chancellor of Austria, is taking his place among the European dictators. In order to consolidate military power in his own hands, he decreed the dissolution of all private armies, this being aimed especially at the Fascist Heimwehr headed by Prince Ernst von Starhemberg. The prince directed his followers to obey the edict, and Major Fey, Starhemberg's rival for control of control of the Heimwehr, called on the elements recognizing his leadership to preserve order.

Prince von Starhemberg.

The chancellor's order also affected his own Catholic storm troops. All the private troops were ordered consolidated with the Austrian state militia. This would increase Austria's official armed forces to about 158,000 men. The dissolution decree met strong opposition within the cabinet, and was voted after three ministers had walked out.

Schuschnigg's task now is to actually disarm the private armies. If he succeeds in doing this, his complete control over Austria may be conceded. It is recalled that the Heimwehr was ordered to disarm in 1931, that the government seized many weapons, and that a year later some 40,000 Heimwehr men appeared fully armed and uniformed. Von Starhemberg may not be really squelched this time, either. It is a certainty that he has a powerful friend in Premier Mussolini of Italy.

Typhoon in Philippines Kills Many Persons

ONE of the worst typhoons in the history of the Philippines swept across Luzon island, killing scores of persons and destroying villages. At least 310 perished and the authorities feared the death list would be much larger for four hundred were reported missing. Eighty-two bodies were recovered from the city of Cabanatuan alone.

Waterway Money Allotted for Atlantic Coast

MEMBERS of the Atlantic Deeper Waterways association, assembling in Tireton, N. J., for the annual convention, were informed by President Roosevelt that funds totaling $24,000,000 have been allotted for waterway improvements along the Atlantic coast during 1937. In a letter to President J. Hampton Moore of the association, to be read to the convention, Mr. Roosevelt also said:

"This year has been noteworthy in witnessing the completion of the 1,435 mile inside route of the intracoastal waterway from Trenton to Miami. Much credit for this accomplishment belongs to your association and it is to be congratulated therefor. Other waterway projects of permanent value to the nation sponsored by your organization have been completed or are progressing in a satisfactory manner."

John L. Lewis States Labor Peace Terms

WILLIAM GREEN president of the A. F. of L., who had just been calling on President Roosevelt at Hyde Park, N. Y., told the newspapermen that the prospects for peace between the warring factions in the federation were better and that those participating in the controversy were becoming "more temperate." However, that same evening John L. Lewis, the dynamic leader of the Committee for Industrial Organization, rather dashed the aforesaid prospects for peace. In Washington he laid down, as the only basis for restoration of peace in the ranks of organized labor, a program consisting of these two propositions:

J. L. Lewis

1. Revocation by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor of the order suspending ten C. I. O. unions on charges of insurrection.

2. Isolation of certain mass production industries which would be organized strictly on Lewis' "one big union" theory.

It had been stated that David Dubinsky, head of one of the suspended unions, had submitted a compromise peace proposal, but Lewis told the correspondents that he knew of no change in feeling between the battling factions; that he had made no move for peace and contemplated none; that the C. I. O. drive to unionize the steel industry was "proceeding satisfactorily" and that the Dubinsky proposal was similar to the one previously offered to and rejected by the A. F. of L. council.

Russia Angrily Warns Fascist Nations

HELP given the Spanish insurgents by Fascist countries so enraged soviet Russia that she gave notice that, unless it ceased she would free herself from any obligations to the agreement for neutrality. The representatives of the 27 nations on the international committee of non-intervention in the Spanish war were about to meet in London, and Moscow's challenge caused a real sensation. Moiseyvich Kagan, soviet delegate on the committee, specifically named Portugal, Italy and Germany as the offenders and called for an investigation. It is believed that if Russia is not satisfied in this matter she will send airplanes and other war material to the Spanish government.

The committee refused to take any action on the Russian complaint, averring that the charges were not specific enough.

Spanish Fascists pushed their lines so closely around Madrid that they called on the government to surrender the capital immediately and thus save it from a destructive bombardment. An airplane fleet showered the city with circulars telling the citizens that further resistance was useless. One of the most threatening of General Franco's advances was directed at Aranjuez, whose capture would cut off Madrid's food supply from the Mediterranean.

Swanson's Hint to Japan About Fortifications

AS THE time for the expiration of the Washington naval treaty draws nearer, the utterances of Secretary of the Navy Swanson take on more and more the nature of sharp warnings to Japan not to get too gay in the Pacific. In a press conference the other day he said:

"Fortifications are intended to answer fortifications. One menace must be met by another menace."

And he gave notice that the navy should be ready to do the necessary meeting.

About the same time the State department was studying a proposition, made to it and to Japan by Great Britain, for an extension of the treaty pledge of the three nations not to build new fortifications or naval bases in certain of their Pacific possessions.

Winant Shows Well in Franking Abuse Attack

ATTACKING abuse of the franking privilege, which has been practiced by followers of any and all parties when they got the chance, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan proposes that congress pass legislation that will put a stop to this evil, "for the sake upon the one hand of the postal revenue and for the sake, on the other, of political fair play."

J. G. Winant

When John G. Winant resigned from the social security board, his letter to the President was a strong pro-New Deal document. It was printed by the press bureau of the social security board and franked to a large mailing list, and Senator Vandenberg asked Mr. Winant whether he thought that was a legitimate use of the franking privilege. Mr. Winant replied promptly that, lest there be any question of the propriety of the matter, he had paid the mailing costs. This attitude was warmly commended by Senator Vandenberg, as it must be by all good citizens.

Finds Private Debt Load Is Not Excessive

BASING its conclusions on a study covering the period from 1900 to 1935, the National Industrial Conference board finds that there is no evidence to support the theory that the burden of private debt upon business is excessive. Statements that private debt is "absorbing wealth" or is showing a changed and unfavorable relationship to wealth, or that the depression was precipitated by an excessive debt burden are without factual basis, the board reported.

Interest charges have not outrun the capacity to pay them, according to the board's study, which showed that the rates of growth of private long-term debt and of interest charges from 1900 to 1935 were similar to those of national wealth and national income.

Since 1930 private long term debt has tended to decline. Only the public utilities have increased the amount of their outstanding debt. But the board points out that no debt problem exists in the public utility field as a whole and that expansion of the electric light and power utilities has been on a sound basis, with the industry in a safe position to meet interest charges.

The steam railroads, taken as a whole, are neither overcapitalized nor overburdened with debt, the board concludes.

Court Opens Way for Security Act Test

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE C. B. KENNEMER of Montgomery, Ala., issued an order halting collection in Alabama of a one per cent payroll tax to finance the unemployment program. The result, it is expected, will be a clear cut test of the validity of the New Deal's social security act, for lawyers had no doubt the case would be carried to the United States Supreme court. The order was granted the Gulf State Steel corporation of Gadsden, Ala., on a plea that the unemployment insurance program, operated in co-operation with the federal government, violates both state and federal constitutions.

Karl Radek Is Latest Accused in Russia

ACCUSED of complicity in the plot against Dictator Stalin for which 16 prominent Russians were executed in August, Karl Radek, brilliant journalist, is under arrest and in danger of losing his life. He disappeared just after the executions of the others, but was caught a few days ago.

In his last article, published in the official newspaper Izvestia, Radek confessed his unfaithfulness to the Communist party, but defended himself with a vitriolic attack on Trotzky and claimed he had "expiated" his sins by foiling Trotzky's attempted sabotage of the Stalin regime.

Swedish Aviator Fails in Stockholm Flight

KURT BJORKVALL, Swedish aviator, made an attempt to fly alone from New York to Stockholm. Thirty-two hours after the start he was picked up from the ocean about one hundred miles off the coast of Ireland. Supposedly he had run short of fuel. The rescue was made by a French trawler.

Handknit Effect in Machine Knits

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WHETHER you knit or whether knitting is not one of your accomplishments the fact remains that, to be "in style," you simply must have a goodly collection of smart knitted clothes in your autumn and winter wardrobe.

No wonder the love of knitted outfits grows upon us, for, put to the test there's nothing more practical for general wear, for travel, for sports, for week-end visits, no type of apparel that so retains a well-groomed, unwrinkled appearance under every circumstance as do the handsome high-styled knitted costumes that grow handsomer and smarter down to the last detail with every passing moment.

This season's knitted collections bear an especially encouraging message to non-knitters in that the machine knits now showing have taken on a patrician hand-knit look that might baffle even an expert at first glance. One of the outstanding numbers on the fall program is the tweed-knit suit that looks so convincingly hand-knit that unless you tell your friends they will never dream that it is machine done. Just to get an idea of one of these stunning tweedy knit suits we are calling your attention to the model to the left in the group illustrated. Here a multicolored tweed knit wool in handknit effect is trimly fashined in a three-piece costume. The jacket has two set-in pockets edged in green to match the monotone self-striped blouse, and the leather belt and buttons are also in green. Can you imagine anything more fitting for a colorful autumn day?

The two frocks shown also typify the trend toward hand-knit effects as achieved in loom-knit fashions. The lady of fashion seated is wearing a two-piece frock in the new blue-spruce color, simulating in stitch and styling a classic hand-knit. The tuck-in scarf is velveteen in deep wine color, which goes to show how striking and out-of-the-ordinary are the new color combinations that are being played up so dramatically this season.

To the right in the picture, a high-necked sweater blouse in deep brown has an accompanying brown and white tweedy-knit skirt done in a cross-ribbed stitch.

One among many of the fascinating things in regard to knitted fashions is that they have taken on clever dressmaker details that measure up perfectly to topnotch styling. For instance, there are knit costume suits that have the latest in tunic or swagger coats that are so goodlooking that out comes your checkbook with orders to deliver without delay. On some of the dresses and suits there are bindings and accents of velvet, of suede, of grosgrain ribbon with unique fastenings, that include zippered novelties, huge metal clips and buttons galore.

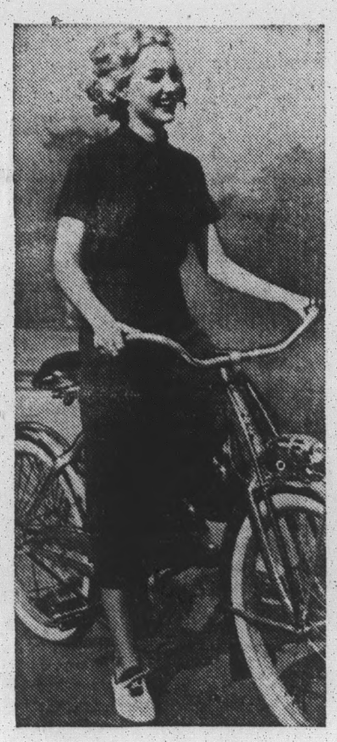

Pleated skirt effects in knits are very attractive. In some instances the skirt is widened with godets. And have you heard about the new black sweater craze? As a college fashion the black sweater worn with a bright plaid skirt is scoring a big success although every fashion alert woman is yielding to the urge of these sweaters.

The new knit fabrics are introducing such interesting themes as jacquard patternings that are knitted right into the fabric. These are perfectly stunning for the separate blouse or the swanky waistcoats that fashion is so conspicuously spotlighting this season.

KNITTED CULOTTE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Trim and sportsmanlike knitted culottes are what this blond young lady selected for her morning bicycle spin through the parks. Her stylish and at the same time most practical outfit is in the popular dubonnet color, its glorious autumn red tone adding greatly to its chic and charm. The shirtwaist blouse, so perfectly tailored, tucks neatly into the culotte skirt. More and more sportswomen are appreciating the worthwhileness of knitted apparel. It is so dependable, so satisfactory on every count, be it comfort, dependable wearableness or good style. It is easy to be understood why knitted apparel is so outstandingly in the foreground of fashion these days.

ACCESSORIES MAKE ONE CHIC OR DOWDY

It doesn't cost one bit more to select hosiery that matches one's shoes, or harmonizes with them, than it does to pick up shades haphazardly. When buying a hat, keep in mind the color of the coat and do the same with gloves, scarves and purses.

Dress accessories form the ensemble, and it is that which makes a woman chic or dowdy. Nowadays, one must keep in mind the complete picture. Make-up should also be considered. Rouge and lipstick that glorify one outfit will kill another. Half a dozen shades of lipstick are not too many for the girl with the average wardrobe, especially now that gay colors are fashionable.

Pressed Grape Tones Now in Use for Accessories

The "pressed grape" shades in gloves, shoes and purses are featured all along Fifth avenue—burgundy, raisin, claret, muscatel . . . One window is full of aubergine, the new eggplant shade, an ideal accent for black . . . aubergine, claret and muscatel shoes are being made . . . or you can choose malaga purple accessories, and wear them with black, fog blue, spruce green or brown . . .

The smartest outfit on the avenue was an oxford gray tailored suit with a tiny black stripe, worn with a dull crepe man-tailored blouse of black, an antique silver and mother of pearl brooch at the collar, smart because the suit was perfectly tailored.

Fur-Trimmed Hats Seen in Late Paris Collections

Fur is used lavishly in the new collections in Paris. Many hats are either trimmed or made entirely of fur, and a black velvet suit trimmed with a luxurious silver fox collar is matched by a peaked velvet hat trimmed with the head of a silver fox. Bright shoe-button eyes and pointed ears give the hat a very perky look.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

BILLY MINK MAKES HIMSELF AT HOME

THE big woodpile between the barn and the henhouse in the farmyard Billy Mink had discovered, was a regular castle for Billy. That is what it was, a regular castle. Billy is so slim that he could slip through the openings between the sticks in much the same way that Striped Chipmunk pops in and out between the stones of the old stone wall. Billy doesn't need much room, and he soon found that down underneath that wood were little chambers plenty big enough for him to curl up in.

The first thing he did was to make himself thoroughly acquainted with that woodpile. He found every opening that led into or under it. He learned every little passage it contained. He picked out one of the best of the little chambers down underneath in which to curl up to sleep when he was tired. No one could get at him under that woodpile. He felt as safe there as ever he had felt anywhere in all his life. It made him chuckle to think how safe he was there, and all the time living right close to those two-legged creatures called men, who delight in killing such little people as Billy.

As soon as he had become thoroughly familiar with that woodpile, Billy set out to explore the surroundings. His new home suited him, but a home without food would be as bad as no home at all, so Billy started out to see what chances there were of making a good living.

First he visited the henhouse. It didn't take him long to find a way under the henhouse, and that there was a hole in the henhouse floor in a dark corner through which he could slip with ease. But Billy didn't go inside that night. Billy possesses a shrewd little head. He had had experience enough with men to know that it was best that they should not know that he was anywhere about. He knew that those hens belonged to men, and that the instant they found one killed, or missing they would begin to hunt for him. So, though the smell of those hens made Billy's mouth water, he decided that he would see what other food was to be found.

From the henhouse, Billy went over to the big barn. This was another place just to his liking. Underneath it was dark, the very kind of a place Billy liked. There were holes up through the floor. Billy sniffed at the edge of the first one he came to, and he knew right away who had made that hole. It had been made by Robber the Rat. Billy's eyes sparkled. It would be much more fun to hunt Robber the Rat and his relatives than to kill stupid, helpless hens.

MOTHER'S COOK BOOK

EVERYDAY FOODS

THERE is no more tasty breakfast or luncheon bread than:

Graham Gems.

To one cupful of sifted graham flour add one cupful of sour milk, one beaten egg, half a teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of soda, two tablespoonfuls of sugar and three tablespoonfuls of shortening. Bake in gem pans.

Coffee Cake.

Warm three-fourths of a cupful of shortening, beat three eggs, stir in half a cupful of sugar and a cupful of raisins, mix all with the shortening and add to five cupfuls of light bread sponge. Mix well, add flour and stir until as thick as the spoon will mix. Set into a pan to rise and when light spread in shallow pans. Cover with soft butter, sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon well mixed and set to rise. Bake when light.

Banana Dessert.

Slice perfect bananas lengthwise into halves, spread with raspberry jam and put together sandwich fashion. Lay on a glass plate and serve with whipped cream sweetened and flavored; garnish with a cherry.

Simple Dessert.

Place a layer of shredded pineapple or any good flavored fruit in a glass dish, cover with cake or cooky crumbs, add more fruit and finish the top with crumbs. Over all heap whipped cream sweetened and flavored. Serve cold.

Raisin Cookies.

Stew two cupfuls of raisins and chop fine. Cream together one cupful of butter with two cupfuls of sugar, add two well beaten eggs, the raisins and two tablespoonfuls of sour cream, one tablespoonful of grated nutmeg, two tablespoonfuls of cinnamon, two teaspoonfuls of soda, with flour enough to make a soft dough. Bake carefully for they burn easily.

Rocks.

Cream one cupful of butter or sweet shortening, add one and one-half cupfuls of sugar, two beaten eggs, two and one-half cupfuls of flour sifted with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, add spices, dates, walnuts, all together making a cupful. Drop by spoonfuls on a baking sheet.

HOW LONG?

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

HOW long have land and sea contended!
And has the contest ever ended?
The sea rolls out and bears the sand,
The sea rolls in and builds the land,
And yet, it seems to me, the strand
Grows every year a bit more splendid.

How long has right with wrong contested,
But little wrought, yet little rested,
Applause not always for the knight
Who fights forever for the right,
And yet, it seems to me, more bright
His honor every time it's tested.

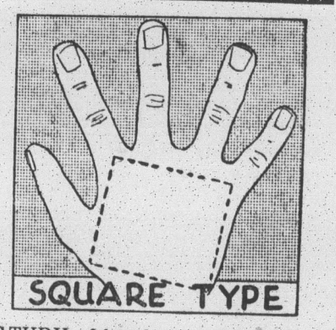

How long must good the good endeavor,
With hate so stubborn, sin so clever?
Hate seems so hard, and sin so strong,
Yet does it matter much how long?
Because, it seems to me, the wrong
Must change, for right is right forever.

THE LANGUAGE OF YOUR HAND

By Leicester K. Davis

© Public Ledger, Inc.

STUDY of hands by type, remember, is the important first stage through which you must progress to the more complicated meanings of lines and other elements within the palm. The outstanding characteristics of the seven types are treated individually in these lessons. Memorize them carefully in order that you may have an accurate gauge of hands you analyze.

Second. The Square Type of Hand.

The outstanding characteristic of this type is the squareness of palm from edge to edge and from the base of the fingers to the line of the wrist. The fingers are of medium length, well placed and symmetrical, with pronounced squareness of shape and very little taper. The nails are broad, well shaped. The joints are seldom prominent.

The thumb of the Square Type is much longer than that of the Primal Type, is set much higher on the hand and stands well out from the palm. The thumb of this type is always well shaped, the inner side of the nail joint sloping back to the nail edge in a firm but graceful arc.

The palm and undersize portions of the fingers are moderately fleshed, but are firm and have none of the pillowed appearance of the coarser Primal Type.

Possessors of Square Type hands are nearly always practical, serious thinking, dependable folk who get things done. They may always be relied upon to finish the task which requires analysis, a high degree of concentration and perseverance. The Square Type hand is found in every line of endeavor which calls for balanced character, reflective foresight and precision of method. Which accounts, no doubt, for the predominance of this type among surgeons, lawyers and scientists.

For President
FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT

AND AMERICA STILL LIVES!

This may be the year, as the politicians on both sides would have us believe, that America will be ruined or saved by the election of one or the other of the two major candidates for the Presidency. Lest anyone be in a panic over the imminence of catastrophe, however, it might be well to remember that this country has been pronounced on the brink of disaster countless times in the past, and has always managed to pull through somehow. It is interesting to recall how even the most commonplace institutions of today were once denounced as certain to bring catastrophe. A couple of decades ago they were saying passage of pure food laws would establish a dangerous precedent that would put the nation on the rocks in no time! And in 1888 Grover Cleveland was warning that the nation would not survive "communism of embined wealth and capital."

WINGS OVER THE PACIFIC

A chapter in the history of man's conquest of the air was written in California on the twenty first of this month.

There were excited farewells and then the roar of airplane motors. The huge flying boat taxied away from the shore, picked up speed and rose gradually off the water and soared out through the Golden Gate.

For the first time in history, trans-Pacific passengers—eighteen of them aboard that China Clipper— were off on an 8200-mile journey to the Orient.

Everyone had sensed the historic implications of this flight. More than a thousand applied for passage. One or two of the wealthier business men, movie celebrities and financiers, when they found they were too late, tried to charter the whole Clipper. The lucky eighteen signed up months ago. The man who was first to reserve a place, however, was not aboard. He was Will Rogers.

Inauguration of this regular trans-Pacific passenger service marked the completion of a pioneering achievement begun nearly two years ago.

Some day the nation, and California in particular, will look back on it as we now do on the driving of the golden spike linking east and west by the iron horse, or on the first ocean crossing by a steamship.

NEWSPAPER READERS BUY

This could be construed as shop talk, but the fact that newspaper readers buy 14 to 22 per cent more merchandise than non-readers does have social and economic implications, and therefore qualifies as fit subject matter for editorial comment.

The figures were reported at the University of Southern California last week after a survey based on a study of newspaper subscriber and non-subscriber lists.

As for the economic significance, the man who first said that it pays to advertise ought to have added that it pays not only the advertiser, but the whole of society as well.

America's relatively high standard of living owes much to advertising. It stimulates desire for more and better things, and that means ever greater markets for ever increasing farm and factory production.

Incidentally, the survey disclosed another fact may have much to do with California's leading place in the nation's recovery. Californians read more papers per capita than people of any other state, numbering 390 per 1000 population as compared with the national average of 290 per 1000.

Statistics continue to gather volumes of details on crime and the criminal. Every 20 seconds a major crime is committed in United States. Between sunrise and sunet every day 35 men and women meet criminal death. American crime cost is above $13,000,000,000 annually. We have more armed law-breakers than there are armed soldiers and sailors in United States. We make 35,000 arrests every month, and only one criminal in ten pays the penalty for his crime. An officer loses his life for every nine criminals killed.

The cry about the increase of crime is not a happy subject to dwell upon, but when we get into the influence, it becomes still more awakening; it is alarming and demands attention! Criminals were all boys once, and by bad influences and surroundings they soon become a fit subject for knavery. It has been said that if a boy goes to Sunday school he won't go to jail. This all depends, and here is the all-important question. When 90 per cent of the delinquency is caused by poor environment and inadequate family life of the boy, we must change the environment and influence in the home. A teacher who can mold the characters of her pupils is doing a work whose value is beyond measure. The child, or boy, whether at home or at school, is going through development processes constantly. It has been said that many criminals violate the laws because of some unapparent ailment—failure of the ductless glands to function properly, press on nerves, or other conditions—which weakens and finally tears away that which causes normal men and women to be law-abiding citizens. It is a great question, and has a serious bearing when crime is increasing as it seems today.

The mountain apple crop harvest is one of the largest in recent years. It is estimated to run between 200,000 and 250,000 packed boxes. It is not generally known to the average Californian what it means when we say "mountain apples," but there is a vast difference! Any old kind of apple may please a few; the mountain grown fruit has a distinction in flavor and quality which some will tell you "makes the mouth water" to just even think about them. Of all the fruits for health and deliciousness, the humble apple draws the prize. The old saying, "An apple a day, keeps the doctor away," is more truth than poetry; especially an apple eaten with the "skin on"—Nature's best recipe. But how many forget, and call an apple "just another variety of fruit!"

To Celebrate Navy Day

Approximately 90 warships and auxiliaries and all the naval shore establishments on the shores of San Diego will keep open house to residents of San Diego county on Navy Day, Tuesday, October 27.

Through the medium of the newspapers throughout the county Vice Admiral Frederick J. Horne, senior officers present afloat, and Rear Admiral Sinclair Gannon, district commandant, extend a cordial invitation for residents, to visit the ships and shore stations.

There will be band concerts and regimental parades. Of particular interest to school children will be the various educational and scientific exhibits at the Destroyer Base, Naval Air Station, Marine Base and Naval Training Station. Guides will be available on ships and shore stations to escort visitors and explain to them the functions of the various aircraft, signalling, gunnery and other exhibits.

At the Naval Air Station in the balloon hangar will be a display of the latest types of fighting, bombing and scouting planes, life saving equipment, navigation instruments, radio ordnance and photography.

Navy Day was inaugurated in 1922 by the Navy League of the United States and its observance is sponsored annually by the League. October 27 was selected because it is the anniversary of the birth of the late President Theodore Roosevelt, so much of whose life was devoted to establishing a sound naval policy for the American nation.

PAUL KRUGER OPENS LIGHT HOUSE CAFE

Not because Paul Kruger runs the light house on Point Loma but because he has an advantageous spot on Mission bay channel is the reason for Mr. Kruger naming his new place of business the "Light House Cafe."

The building at 5072 W. Point Loma blvd., for many years operated as a bait house has now been thoroughly renovated and decorated in an inviting manner.

Batt's teams and teams captained by Virginia Walker, Jane Richley, Janet Glithero and Muriel Brent. The girl's sportsmanship banner was won by Jane Richley's team. New captains and teams will be chosen this week.

OCEAN FRONT NEWS

The H-5, L-6 class of Miss Figgins' room is busily preparing the first issue of "The Ocean Front News"—school newspaper. Much interest is expected in a contest which the "News" is promulgating. The contest which is something of a secret as yet was the idea of Beau Bonnifield, a promising young future journalist who acts as make up man for the "Ocean Front News."

MESDAMES DUNN AND CLARK RETURN FROM CONVENTION

Mrs. W. S. Dunn and Mrs. John Clarke represented the local union at the 54th annual WCTU convention, held at Bakersfield Oct. 13-16. Over 2000 new members were secured, 175 new LTL's and 496 White ribbon recruits, during the past year. WCTU representatives introduced 13 bills and all passed, they fought five bad bills, which were defeated, at Sacramento, this year.

There is great need to awaken people especially parents, to the facts! 2000 liquor bottles were recently found on a football field after the game. 250,000,000 more gallons of liquor manufactured this year than last, and the National Liquor Dealers bulletin says that bootleggers still sell one half of all liquor sold in the United States.

It is a proved fact that in some localities no contract is signed until applicant swears not to teach the evil effects of alchohol, in the school.

Lomans Win From Grossmont

In a rainy game which represented a skating and swimming contest far more than a football battle, the Point Loma High school squad defeated the Grossmont Foothillers 6-0 last Friday on the Loman's Ross field. The game left Point Loma riding at the head of the Metropolitan league, while Grossmont dropped to the cellar position.

The lone score came in the first five minutes of play when the Lomans marched down to the Foothillers' four yard line, whence fullback Lutes plunged over just as the first drops of rain began to fall. The teams lined up for the try-for-point; the rain increased to a steady downpour; the ball slithered off on an extreme tangent. Score; Point Loma, 6; Grossmont, 0.

Jupe Pluvius held sway until well into the second quarter, and he did his work so well that the field was soon just a slippery mess. Fumbles and spills were the only features of the second half.

Today, Friday, Point Loma High gridders travel to Coronado to engage the transbay team. From past experience the Lomans will be strong favorites to win this game.

nk Deposits All-Time High

ank Failure in Past Year, Record for National g System

tion by the President averted complete ruin.

One of the first acts of President Roosevelt, upon assuming office, was to declare a nation-wide bank holiday. He promised that banks would be reopened as rapidly as possible, and that when they reopened, the money of the depositors would be safe. As he expressed it, the "fear of fear" had to be banished.

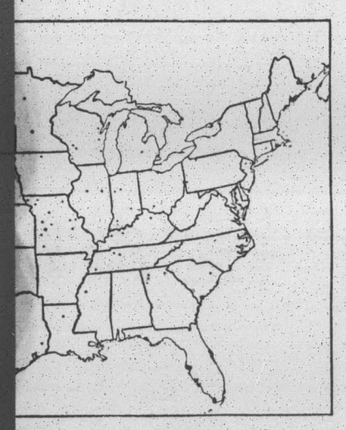

The Farm Credit Administration went to the rescue of mortgaged farms. The Home Owners Loan Corporation went to the rescue of individuals and corporations in many fields. The Agricultural Adjustment Administration, here are 8923 dots on the map and each a bank failure.

the Commodity Credit Corporation and other agencies met the emergency, stopped the tidal wave of deflation and depression, and brought about the march toward recovery instead of chaos.

No part of this whole program was more important than the creation of a sound banking system, in which the depositor could have complete confidence.

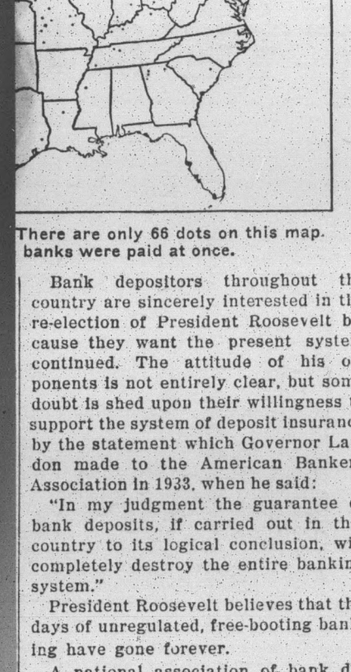

There are only 66 dots on this map. banks were paid at once.

Bank depositors throughout the country are sincerely interested in the re-election of President Roosevelt because they want the present system continued. The attitude of his opponents is not entirely clear, but some doubt is shed upon their willingness to support the system of deposit insurance by the statement which Governor Landon made to the American Bankers Association in 1933, when he said:

"In my judgment the guarantee of bank deposits, if carried out in this country to its logical conclusion, will completely destroy the entire banking system."

President Roosevelt believes that the days of unregulated, free-booting banking have gone forever.

A national association of bank depositors has declared that President Roosevelt's staunch and courageous advocacy of deposit insurance is one of the outstanding contributions of the century to the well-being of the American people.

Don't Be Fooled By Figures

I. Spending Under Republicans:

Under Hoover the national debt. rose 3½ billion (net). In the last 2¼ years the gross debt increased nearly 5 billion. Yearly Deficits Were 59 Percent of Expenditures in 1932; 46 Percent in 1933.

WHAT DID PRESIDENT HOOVER BUY?

A six-billion-dollar loss in farm income, bank failures, foreclosed homes, shut-down factories, government bonds at low levels, national panic.

The depression was bought and the people sold.

Our Yearly National Income Dropped 40 Billion
Our Federal Revenues Fell 2 Billion

THIS WAS REPUBLICAN PROSPERITY

II. Spending Under Democrats:

Under President Roosevelt the gross national debt has increased about thirteen billion(including the 2 billion bonus). Against this, however, the Government has 2 billion in gold profit, a 2 billion increase in the General Treasury Fund, and another 2 billion investment in bank stocks, loans and other repayable assets so that the net increase is cut down to 7 billion. It costs less to carry this heavier debt because easier credit and able treasury financing have saved approximately 1 per cent in interest rates.

Yearly Deficits Were 56 % of Expenditures in 1934; 48% in 1935.

WHAT HAS PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT BOUGHT?

A 1935 gross farm income of over 8 billion—a 2.8 billion rise since 1932.
Reemployment of 5 million workers. A payroll gain of 59 per cent since 1933.
The highest volume of industrial production since 1930.
Less than 50 bank failures in 1935 compared with more than 1,400 in 1932. No bank failures during the past year.
1936 dividends at a 5-year peak.
Government bonds at their top prices, the best test of treasury soundness.

Our National Income, as Estimated for 1936, Will Have Grown Some 21 Billion in 4 Years. Federal Revenues Are Running More Than Double the Receipts in 1933.

THIS IS DEMOCRATIC PROSPERITY

III. Balancing the Budget:

When President Roosevelt took office he faced a grave crisis. He could stand on his platform and cut expenditures. Or he could draw heavily on government funds to feed the starving and aid banks and business. He chose the latter as the only road to recovery. If the Government could shoulder a war debt of 25 billion to save Europe, President Roosevelt felt that is must use its credit even more freely to save its suffering people in a national catastrophe. Had government help come sooner and on a more adequate scale, it would have taken less spending and lending to stop the depression

ORDINARY EXPENSES MET

In no fiscal year have the ordinary expenses of government under President Roosevelt exceeded revenues. Increases have been caused by farm aid, new construction and additions to regular recurring items such as veterans' benefits, pensions, national defense and the like.

EMERGENCIES BROUGHT RISE

RELIEF is the great human cost which has run up government expenses. As good times return, this item is being lowered.

DECREASING THE DEFICIT

President Roosevelt's program calls for a steadily decreasing deficit each year. In 1935 the deficit was 400 million less than in 1934; had it not been for the soldiers' bonus and the loss of AAA taxes, the deficit would have declined again in the fiscal year 1936. For 1937 there will be a drop below 1936, as estimated by the Treasury, of over 3 billion (to$2,675,700,000).

The gross national debt per capita was $250 after the war. Today it is $255(including a bonus charge of over $15 apiece). We reduced the debt then. We can do it again.

The First Step to Reduce NATIONAL Debt Is To Lighten PERSONAL Debt.

Appraising the New Deal

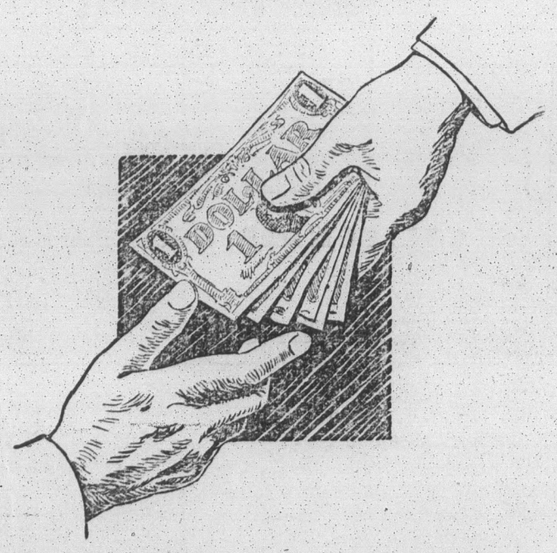

Editorial Comment by Eminent Leaders

THE CLAIM has been made that we Americans have purchased recovery by increasing the national debt. Well, a war cannot be won without the expenditure of money. During the past four years we have fought the most remorseless enemy in our history. We have struggled with depression on a battlefield which has extended into every square mile of American territory. As a result, there has been an increase in the real national debt of about 7½ billion dollars. To balance that, there has been a rise of over 30 billion in total national income and of 73 billions in the nation's tangible wealth.—U. S. Senator Robert F. Wagner.

Some call the New Deal reckless experimentation, but the most reckless experiment in which America could now engage would be to stop Roosevelt. No clear-thinking executive would discharge an executive under whom his business had climbed from failure to success, and hire some unknown who promised to reduce total expenditures without reducing any one expenditure.—Edward A. Filene.

What about bank insurance? In my opinion, even in its short life, it has proved itself a wholesome and needed tonic for the entire banking system.—Maurice L. Briedenthal, Kansas City banker.

May we give you six dollars?

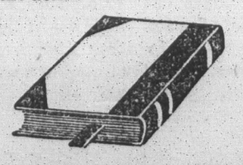

NOT in cash, of course. We're speaking of its equiva... But here is something for you to consider:

Every year this newspaper brings you at least three outstanding novels in serial form. Purchased as books each would cost not less than $2, making a total expenditure of at least $6 per year.

Like yourself, we could find plenty of uses for that $6. Some member of the family is always in need of a new pair of shoes or some other necessity. But at the same time your requirements for good reading material must be met. By accepting these three novels each year we feel you are treating yourself to real enjoyment, at the same time giving your purse a substantial boost.

These novels are a source of constant pride to us. Every year we select them from the season's most outstanding best sellers, offered in serial form by a large newspaper syndicate organization. We'd like to feel that you—as a subscriber—always look forward to reading the coming installment in the next issue. It gives us a great satisfaction to know that here is another reason why our paper is popular in the home.

You are invited to begin reading our novels now. These regular brief visits to fictionland will prove a delightful interlude from your work-a-day activities. And it will make us happy to know that you are getting enjoyment from them.

IT'S A NEW TAX ON YOUR FOOD

..and other necessities

They call Proposition #22 a "Retail Store License" to hide the fact that you will pay it

IT IS CLEVERLY NAMED to look like something else. But no one denies that its main purpose is to raise retail prices —to increase the cost of living for Californians who can least afford it!

When read carelessly, Proposition #22 sounds innocent enough. It taxes an individual store $1.00 a year for the right to do business. But it taxes chain stores $500.00 for each store over nine.

But, says the U. S. Federal Trade Commission:

"If the ability to undersell, based on greater efficiency or on elimination of credit and delivery cost, is destroyed by taxation, it is the consuming public which will really pay the tax and not the chain."

For chain stores operate on a small profit. They eliminate middlemen's profits and unnecessary in-between expense. The savings they make by operating efficiently are passed on to you in prices 10% below the average. The Harvard (University) School of Business Research states these to be the facts.

The tax is greater than the profit of four out of five chain stores. Thus some of them will be forced to close—allowing their competitors to raise prices.

Surviving chains will be forced to raise their prices to pay the "license."

In either case—you will foot the bill.

Admittedly not for revenue purposes, the tax is a cleverly masked attempt to subsidize the middleman and wasteful business methods—at your expense.

If you think that chain store competition helps to keep all prices reasonable—if you believe that taxes are high enough already, particularly on foods —vote NO and keep prices low.

For no matter what they call it...no matter how they try to conceal it...22 is a tax on you—VOTE NO!

22 IS A TAX ON YOU—VOTE NO!

CALIFORNIA CONSUMERS CONFERENCE

"CALIFORNIA'S HOUR" SEARCH FOR TALENT APPROACHES CLIMAX

A six-month search for new stars of radio in California draws near its climax next Monday night (Oct. 26) when "California's Hour" stages its third and last semi-final contest of the present series.

Since last April talent scouts of the big musical show have been scouring valleys, mountain regions and cities of a State noted for such air-lane celebrities as Donald Novis, Bing Crosby, Francia White and Lawrence Tibbett.

With Novis, the former Pasadena boy who was sent to fame by an amateur contest, as the singing star, the semi-finals will present listeners of the Columbia-Don Lee network with the cream of singers and instrumentalists found in nine widely separated regions of California.

Among them will be Hollace Shaw, a brilliant young titian-haired soprano from Claremont, who caught the fancy of national network officials before she finished singing her number on the program saluting Pomona and Ontario.

Also, there will be Nicholas Angelo—the Italian tenor from Hollywood, born in the same countryside that produced Caruso and featured in "The Great Ziegfeld"—whom the impresario of the Pasadena Civic Opera sought to sign before he sang his last note on the salute to Hollywood.

Oakland will send a contestant being chosen on the salute to Alameda County this Monday night (Oct. 19) as its candidate for the grand final prize of $500. From Bakersfield comes Lloyd Combs, better known as "Little Mac," a singer of cowboy ballads.

Ventura County will be represented by Frank Umbro, 23-year-old accordionist; San Joaquin County by Carroll Austin, singing Stockton store clerk; Orange County by a saxaphone quintet composed of Federal Music Project boys; Tulare County by pretty 22-year-old Veda Murphy, a guitar strumming jewelry store clerk, and San Mateo County by Mrs. Mae Walford, a housewife playing water glasses.

Two of the nine acts will be chosen by the listeners to enter the finals the following Monday night. Each of the two will receive a cash prize of $100.

450 Hats Thrown In Ring

Claiming to be the largest single family unit in America, the Rashids of Lafayette, Ill., held their annual conclave a few days ago and voted to put their collective strength of 450 persons behind the Democratic candidate for President.

"We've decided to throw our hats into the Roosevelt ring," declared the family spokesman. "Every adult member of our family was separately questioned, and—without a single exception—they were for Roosevelt. Which certainly ought to prove something!"

One-Two-Three-Four

A newspaper in Missouri has been offering a series of prizes to its readers for the best appraisal of the accomplishments of the New Deal, arranged in order of their importance. The results, when tabulated, show that the consensus of opinion places the Administration's four-year achievements in the following order:

1. Restoration of banking.
2. Help to home owners and farm owners.
3. Farm relief.
4. CCC Camps.
5. Unemployment relief.

GAS TAX DIVERSION WOULD IMPERIL ROAD PROGRAM, SAYS CLUB

"Widening, straightening and installation of proper protective devices in the maintenance and improvement of major streets and highways must be continued unabated for efficient handling of an ever-growing traffic volume in California.

"Whether the heavy traffic density in this state flows freely or mires in a welter of confusion depends upon consistent street and road development."

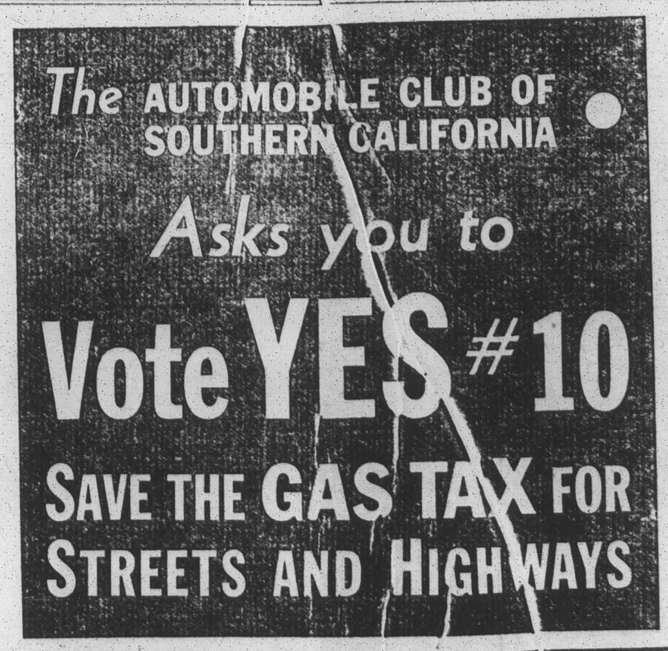

This point was strongly emphasized with facts and figures in a statement issued yesterday by the Automobile club of Southern California on the necessity for an affirmative vote on Proposition 10 on the November ballot.

Success of this initiative measure will provide a constitutional amendment to prevent for all time the diversion of gasoline tax and vehicle fee revenues to other than highway purposes, and thus assure steady, uniform betterment of vital thoroughfares in keeping with traffic needs.

"Vehicular travel in California is at least 10 percent greater this year than in 1935" said the club statement. "Incoming motor tourist travel has increased more than 25 percent this year over last. Traffic counts indicate greatly increased density in all major routes in this touring vacationland.

"Further evidence of heavy highway use is found in state motor vehicle registration figures showing an increase of 11.25 percent this year over 1929, and an eight percent gain within the last year. California car ownership reached an all-time high in 1935, wth 2,254,828 registered vehicles, but the mid-year count just announced by the state motor vehicle department indicates that the total for 1936 will exceed that for 1935 by about 12 percent, and possibly surpass the 2,500,000 mark for all classes of vehicles, including exempt, actually using the roads.

"Street and road improvement is barely keeping pace with rising traffic density. There must be no cessation in the program of providing safe and adequate travel arteries."

BECAUSE Franklin D. Roosevelt has repudiated the pledges he made to the nation and has substituted an un-American program looking to dictatorship.

BECAUSE he has not only spent, but largely wasted, the hugest sum of money ever expended by any peace-time government anywhere, at any time.

BECAUSE the appalling debt thus created can be met only by ruinous taxation or even more ruinous inflation.

BECAUSE his remote-controlled relief system has destroyed the morale of millions of self-respecting citizens and has forced them to become dole takers.

BECAUSE his entire program is based upon the Communistic theory of a centralized, collectivist government which denies and destroys our Constitution-guaranteed rights of states, communities and individuals.

EMERA ASSOCIATION EASTERN STAR MEETING

Eastern Star points of the "Emera Association" gathered from all over the County to make plans for the coming year, Wednesday at seven o'clock at Hotel Churchill, San Diego. A dinner was served in the main dining room, a clever Halloween motif was carried out in the table decorations by Juanita P. Hurst of La Mesa chapter and Aubra McCarthy of Silver Strand chapter, chairman and co-chairman for the evening.

The dinner was followed by one of the most important business meetings of the year in the Sun room. A motion was made and carried that the present corps of officers preside until the January meeting. The officers are: Zetta Jewel Beer, Southern Star chapter, president; Juanita P. Hurst, La Mesa chapter, vice president; Betty Palmer, Southwest chapter, secretary-treasurer; Lucille R. Marsh, Coronado chapter, corresponding secretary; Lloyd Ellis Griffin, San Diego chapter, sponsor. The new 1937 Star points will be invited to attend the January meeting and officers will be elected from that group.

The members of the Emera association for 1936 will be known as the "Charter Members," they being the first Star points to form an association in San Diego county and the first in the state of California to form a combined association of all Eastern Star points.

The Emera association of 1936 will go down on record as being one of the most successful associations ever formed in San Diego county, it being as large as all of the other Eastern Star associations combined. Zetta Jewel Beer, president, appointed La Vange Hunt Richardson of San Diego chapter, general chairman of the hostess' committee, who is authorized to appoint a co-chairman from each of the seventeen chapters in the county, who hope to render every assistance possible in making the year 1937 an even greater success for the new incoming Star points.

A dinner-dance will be held November 14 by the Emera association for all the 1936 Star points, deputy grand matrons, matrons and patrons of San Diego county and their escorts of 1936.

At 7:30 p. m. there will be a service of song and the pastor's sermon topic will be "Trails to Triumph."

METHODIST CHURCH

"Inspired Action" is the subject upon which Rev. Hughes will speak next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. The subject deals with the springs of action in past and present moral crises.

The church school with classes for all age groups in religious education meets at 9:45. In the evening the young people hold their meeting at 7.

THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY: POINT LOMA

"Cycles and Civilization" will be discussed next Sunday afternoon at three o'clock in the Temple of Peace, Theosophical International headquarters, Point Loma. Miss Claire Turner, formerly of Seattle, Wash., but for the past two years a member of the headquarters staff, will deliver the forum-lecture. This is Miss Turner's first public appearance in the Temple of Peace, an experience she considers a high privilege and sacred duty. "I am so absorbed with cycles and their effect on civilization," said the young lecturer recently, "that I can think or talk nothing else. The thrilling adventure in thought which I had when I began my research into the subject is one that would excite even the most jaded intellect. Besides it is an interesting key that unlocks many mysteries."

Reincarnation, rebirth, or reimbodiment, thinks Miss Turner, is one expression of cycles; the basis or root of all cause and effect is cyclic law. "We effect cycles and cycles effect us. They explain why we are today a race of so-called civilized people, why there are so many races on earth and in fact why we are on the earth at all."

The Temple forum committee gives a cordial invitation to the public to attend this lecture and participate in asking questions or contributing comments on the subject under discussion

TIE UP IN MAIL SERVICE MAKES SLOW DELIVERY

Some subscribers to the Ocean Beach News last week were delayed in getting their papers several days, due to one of the carriers being ill and another expecting a substitute carrier to take his route that was slow in showing up.

When the substitute carriers did arrive they were new in the territory, making their work slower than it would have been with experienced men on the route, and darkness overtook them two days, so that papers that should have been delivered Friday were not received in some cases until Monday afternoon late.

In the future we request our regular subscribers to let us know if their papers are not delivered Friday, or Saturday at the latest, so that we may endeavor to remedy the trouble.

WPA TURNS DOWN CITY'S PIER PROJECT AT SUNSET CLIFFS

(S. D. Union)

Opposition of a large number of property owners near Sunset Cliffs caused disapproval by the WPA of a project to build a fishing pier there, Frank Y McLaughlin, state WPA administrator, declared yesterday.

He said that when the city and county prepare their new project for a pier at the foot of Pt. Loma ave., Ocean Beach, it will be passed on first by George White, local WPA administrator. The new project is now being prepared by the city, which prepared and submitted the one rejected.

Speaking of the rejection of the first pier plan White said the WPA has so many worthwhile projects where there is 100 percent local support that it chooses from them rather than from those where there is controversy.

McLaughlin said the WPA record shows Supervisor Edgar Hastings, charged in some circles with opposing the pier, to have been in favor of it.

SYNOPSIS

Sleepy Cat, desert town of the Southwest, is celebrating the Fourth of July. Jane Van Tambel, beautiful daughter of Gus Van Tambel, hated owner of Gunlock ranch, has arrived from the East for the first time. She watches the Frontier Day celebration in company with Doctor Carpy, crusty, tender-hearted friend of the community. Henry Sawdy of the Circle Dot ranch, tricked in a fake horse race the day before by Dave McCrossen, foreman at Gunlock, plans revenge. He enters Bill Denison, a handsome young Texas wrangler, in the rodeo which McCrossen is favored to win, and lays heavy bets on him. Unknown to the crowd, Denison is a champion horseman. McCrossen and the young stranger tie in the various events. Denison then drops a cigarette carelessly. Racing down the track full tilt, he picks up the cigarette. The verdict goes to Denison when McCrossen refuses to attempt the stunt. Entreated by the crowd, Denison agrees to perform another trick. Jane Van Tambel is asked for her bracelet and throws it on the track. Just as Denison rides to pick it up a yell from Barney Rebstock, a McCrossen henchman, scares the pony, nearly costing the rider his life. Gun play is prevented by the intervention of Doctor Carpy. Back on Gunlock ranch, after two years in Chicago, because of her father's illness, Jane gets lost riding in the hills and meets Denison, now a neighbor, who guides her home. Not knowing her identity, he speaks bitterly of Van Tambel. She tells McCrossen who brought her home and he denounces Denison as a cattle thief. Later she asks Doctor Carpy why her father is unpopular and he tells her it is because of Van Tambel's ruthless and unscrupulous character. McCrossen tries to woo Jane, but is sharply rebuffed. Once again she loses her way in the hills and meets Denison. On impulse she gives him her bracelet for guiding her home. Their interest in each other growing, she reveals her identity to him. Jane is distressed to learn from Carpy that her father had wronged Denison. The Texan had worked at Gunlock as foreman and been promised a share in the profits. When he quit, Van Tambel reneged. In reprisal Denison has been running cattle off Gunlock ranch. Shamed and humiliated, Jane avoids Denison, but longs to see him. When at length they meet, he confesses his love.

"How is McCrossen coming on, doctor?" asked Jane.

"He'll be up in a few days now. The infection is disappearing. How are you? You're the one I'm interested in."

"Following orders like a lamb, doctor. Don't you see how brown I'm getting?"

"Yes, outside. But what about inside? That's where I want you to get brown. By the way, your friend Bill Denison was in to see me the other day. He's been up north with the fire fighters—'way up on the Crazy Woman at Jim Laramie's ranch. Look here, girl," he continued, "what are you doing tomorrow? We are going to have a moose dinner. Ever eat moose? Come in and try it."

Jane hesitated, "Oh, I don't know—"

"Come along. There'll be nobody else there, if that's what you're afraid of?"

Sleepy Cat looked deserted when Jane rode in next day. Jane asked McAlpin at the barn where all the men were.

"Up north, fire fighting."

"Is it as bad as that?"

"I never saw it so bad in the twenty years I've lived here and at Calabasas! They brought in a wagonload yesterday of the worst burnt men I ever seen in my life. The hospital's pretty near full. Doc Carpy was there all night."

Jane was for going home. She walked up to the hotel and talked with Puss, the housekeeper. "Don't you go," counseled Puss. "If the doctor's expecting to see you, he'll be all upset if you don't stay."

"But with all these men in the hospital? I'd rather wait till he has a free day," suggested Jane.

The housekeeper laughed. "If you wait for a free day for the doctor, you'll wait till Judgment day. And he might be busier then than he is now. There's a preacher in town this week, baptizing folks down in the river. 'Cording to what he says, there'll be a lot more Sleepy Cat fire fighters needing help Judgment day than is needin' it now. Come in here and take off your things."

When Jane sat down with the doctor in his private dining room for the moose dinner, he made light of the fire situation as well as of his labors.

"All in the day's work. Puss is an alarmist. She's always telling me I'm working too hard."

Jane repeated the anecdote of the preacher and Puss' application of it to the doctor himself on Judgment day.

Carpy laughed. "That's Panama she's talking about. Puss is powerful afraid of him . . . Who is he? Why, a pretty good fellow—used to be an auctioneer and all-round gambler—got converted—preaches up and down the line from Medicine Bend to Sleepy Cat. But he volunteered for fire fighting. He's one of the men got burnt yesterday, and he's up with the rest of 'em at the hospital.

The ex-sheriff, Bill Pardaloe, rode out to Gunlock two days later and conscripted the men to fight fire coming down the Crazy Woman and threatening Sleepy Cat.

The quiet of that day and the next was like a calm before a storm. After supper Jane ordered her pony saddled and rode clear up to the summit of Gunlock Knob, where she could see the northern country for many miles.

When she reached the top she was sorry she had attempted the climb. The spectacle was awe-inspiring, but terrifying.

Far beyond the hills and all along the northern horizon she saw patches of dull, silent red, slowly rising and falling, at moments increasing, and again subsiding.

She fell asleep early, but after midnight she woke. The sky was fairly clear, and she could hear the wind singing in the pines about the ranch house. She was roused from her thoughts by the approaching clatter of galloping hoofs. Raising herself to support her head on her elbow, she listened. The clatter came nearer, the galloping faster. In a moment she heard a man pull his horse sharply up and spring from the saddle under her window. "Miss Jane!" he called. "Wake up, please!"

She knew the voice. "I'm awake, Bull. What is it?"

"The boys are ridin' in behind me."

"All of them?"

"Everybody. They'll be here inside twenty minutes."

"What time is it, Bull?"

"From the moon, about two o'clock. The boys'll want somethin' to eat. They're ridin' right out again. I'll call Quong."

"What's the matter, Bull—what are they riding out again for?"

"The fire has crossed the river."

CHAPTER VI

Bull Page, the messenger of alarm, turned in with Quong and Jane to make ready a hasty supper for the hungry, weary men.

McCrossen was in command of the fire fighters and, at the head of the table, looked his part. As he rose from the supper table, his eyes were never brighter as he walked, smoky and covered with the marks of the day's hard fight, but smiling and fresh, over to where Jane was standing.

While Jane asked questions, McCrossen lighted a cigarette. "Not a bit of danger, Jane, to Gunlock—not while I can get out on the fire line, anyway. I've fought these infernal blazes all my life, and I don't figure this one's goin' to beat me. The only thing that worries me, Jane, is to think of your bein' here alone at home while we're fire-fightin'."

"Of course, I can't help some worry now, with the ranch threatened," she returned thoughtfully.

"Jane," he said impressively, "you needn't worry. I like to fight for a girl like you. While I'm able to raise an arm, Jane, I'll be out there thinkin' of you." His hands closed firmly on her shoulders.

She shrugged them and edged uneasily away. "Saddles, boys!" shouted McCrossen in his rich, hearty voice. "Look alive, there, everybody! Come over to where my horse is, Jane. I want you to say good-bye to us! Give the boys a word of cheer."

"Where are you going?" she asked.

"Over the Divide. I want to do some backfirin' north of the pastures. Come along, girl," he insisted, taking her arm firmly.

All at once he caught her in a vise-like grip of his arms and kissed her twice before she could escape. She slapped him indignantly and pushed him violently away.

McCrossen laughed. "Slap me again, Jane; that was worth a string of slaps, girl. But why not take a little practice? You'd get to like it, same as I do!"

Toward the night of the second day, the fire crew straggled back to the ranch house, McCrossen at their head. The store of beer prudently laid in from town was rapidly depleted—circumstances seeming to forbid the restrictions that Jane usually imposed.

Next morning, the sun rose hot and in an atmosphere without a breath of wind. Faces were brighter.

But after breakfast, the mail carrier, Ignace, from the Reservation, on his way to town, brought disquieting news. A fire had broken out in the timber along the eastern boundary, and every buck had been called out to fight it.

McCrossen listened carefully. "Which way was the wind, Ignace, when you left?"

"From the east."

"Hell's bells," exclaimed McCrossen, "just where we don't want it." He questioned the carrier closely. The big ranch was now threatened on the southeast, and McCrossen started with the freshest of his men for the new danger point.

In the afternoon Jane rode into town to order some supplies sent out. While she was in Rubido's store, a white man from the Reservation came in. The clerk who waited on him asked him about the fires down his way.

"Not so good," said the man. "A new one broke out this morning between the Reservation timber and Bill Denison's ranch. Bill's in getting men together now."

Jane, in another aisle and unobserved, walked quietly outdoors and down the street for McAlpin's livery barn.

"Mose," she said to the hostler on duty, "is Bill Denison in town?"

"He is. His horse, Music, is here—Bill rode in pretty fast, an' I been rubbin' Music down. Bill says—"

"Mose, I want to see Bill. Go up the street and see if you can find him. Tell him I want to see him and I'll be up at the hotel.

Half an hour later Jane, sitting with the door open in Doctor Carpy's office, off the hotel lobby, heard footsteps approaching and, turning, saw Denison. She rose quickly, extended her hand, took his without a greeting, and spoke rapidly and nervously. "I heard you were in town," she said, "and that you were in danger at the ranch—I suppose, for that matter, we all are. But they said you were taking out men, and I wanted to see you, Bill, and ask what we could do to help. You won't take that amiss, I'm sure."

"How could I take anything amiss from you?"

"In a common danger," she said, flushing in some confusion and interrupting him to hide it, "we ought to help one another in the hills. What is there I can do? What is the situation, Bill?"

"Well, I suppose I might say, it's like the situation of a man with a loaded pistol pointed at his head," he answered. "I'm all right as long as the gun doesn't go off. The wind's got its finger on the trigger, and you know how these hill winds are—blamed uncertain when they get going—"

"But what can we do at the ranch to help make you safe? Is there anything, Bill? Anything to help?"

Both were conscious of slight strain. Denison shuffled awkwardly. "Why, Miss Jane—"

"Since when Miss Jane?" she asked with asperity. "I didn't know—" he began.

"Neither did I know, Bill. Now answer my question. If you're in danger, tell me what I can do."

"Have the boys keep a close eye on the two Reservation fires. If either of 'em get around Gunlock Knob, it'll be kind of bad for both ranches."

"Yes, but, Bill, how am I to know when or whether they do get around the Knob? How am I going to know whether you yourself need help?" She was beginning to realize that it was impossible to get anything but evasive generalities out of him. "Tell me this: If you need help from us, will you send me word? Right away?"

He thought for a moment. "I'll send word over to you at the ranch house, Jane."

She could not escape the significance of his tone in uttering her name. But she kept her balance and spoke steadily:

"Keep your promise, Bill; I shall be waiting for the word when it comes."

Along the hill trail as Jane rode home the air was heavy with smoke drifting slowly up from the south. It was laden with the pungent smell of brush fire and acrid with the creosote of burned slashings from cut-over lands on the Reservation.

Reaching home, she was not surprised to find everything there abnormally quiet. McCrossen, with most of the men, was up in the hills. The sole exception to the general atmospheric gloom was Quong. Nothing had yet daunted the busy China boy.

When Jane dressed at daybreak and looked out, the wind had shifted and was blowing fresh from the south.

McCrossen and his men were up betimes. He reported to Jane that they had checked the fire up toward the pass. He was in good spirits. Jane went to her breakfast feeling reassured. She was finishing her coffee when Quong stuck his head through the kitchen door into the dining room and said: "Man to see!"

Jane walked to the front door and found a man on horseback.

"What can I do for you?"

"I've just come from Bill Denison's. He says if you can spare a dozen men quick, he can, maybe, save his ranch buildings."

"Tell him I'll do everything I can to get them over right away. What's your name?"

"Scott, ma'm."

Jane ran over to the corral, where McCrossen was closing the wire gate.

"Bill Denison has sent a messenger over—"

"I saw him," interjected McCrossen curtly.

"—asking for help," Jane went on rapidly. "If we can get a dozen men over to him quick, he can save his ranch buildings—"

"A lot of gall, ain't it, Bill Denison lookin' to Gunlock for help?"

"No matter what differences there have been," insisted Jane firmly, "in the hills we're all going to stand together in a time like this. Get the men together, Dave, and get over quick and do what you can."

McCrossen, drawing from his pocket a plug of tobacco, bit off a chunk. "I don't approve of that."

"It's not a question of your approving, Dave. I want you to go. Right off; now!"

McCrossen was in no hurry. "Who's goin' to look after Gunlock if I go over to Bill Denison's?" he asked, regarding Jane sullenly.

Jane was nobody's fool on the danger of the situation.

"Dave," she exclaimed, impatiently, "you know the worst threat to us, with this wind, is from the south. If the Denison ranch burns we're in danger ourselves. Will you saddle up quick and get over there with the boys?" she demanded.

McCrossen made no move to go. "I'll tell you right now I've had a damned sight more experience in these forest fires than you have. And I say my place's right here!" He spoke loudly and angrily.

Jane grew white. "I want you to know I'm boss of this ranch. My father has told you so—and this order is going to be obeyed or I'll know why."

McCrossen faced her with as much animosity as he dared show. "Well, if you want to know one reason why your order won't be obeyed, just look at me—I'm a reason. I know where my place is when Gunlock's in danger," he thundered.

"Stop your talk!" exclaimed Jane. "Will you do as I tell you or not?"

"I will not."

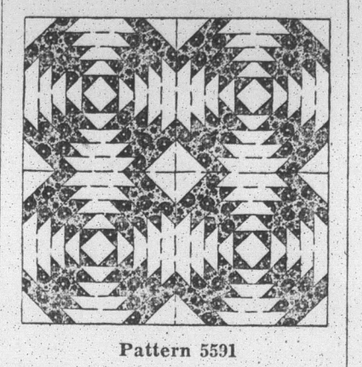

"Then you're discharged as foreman of this ranch. Take your things and get off it by tomorrow morning."

"Like hell I will."

Interesting Story of Local Men's Success

Upper—MAT F. HELLER
Below—MILTON F. HELLER

Many of the one-man corner stores of a generation ago were the humble beginnings of what today are known as chain organizations, representing mass buying, and sound methods of merchandising and distribution.

Invariably the corner store, because of the personality and aggressiveness of the man or men behind it, grew with the commmunity, prospered because it met the public demands and gradually expanded with the passing years.

A typical example which many residents of Ocean Beach will recall is provided by the Heller stores of a few years ago. Founded by Mat. F. Heller, pioneer San Diego business man, the Heller stores spread throughout the county. One such store was established here in 1925.

"The first Heller store was opened in San Diego in 1892, three years after Mrs. Heller and I arrived," said Mr. Heller. "After working a while as clerk in the grocery store owned by my father-in-law, I purchased his stock of groceries and fixtures, buying on credit. This enabled me to start in business myself. Three years later a second store was opened, and as the years went on we opened additional stores, because people in different parts of the city and county requested us to place Heller stores in their communities and neighborhoods.

"When the Heller stores merged with the MacMarr Co. in 1929, we were operating 42 stores, a bakery and warehouse. Through these years we always took an active part in the upbuilding of San Diego and those communities with which we became identified.

"The Safeway-MacMarr stores today operate on the same sound business principles that we always tried to follow in the Heller stores. The only difference is the change in names.

My son, Milton F. Heller, is division manager of all stores in San Diego and Imperial counties.

"The loyalty of our employees and the good will of our customers made possible the expansion of the Heller organization from the one-man store of 1892 to the 42-store organization that merged with MacMarr 37 years later.

"Our organization was typical of what are today called chain store organizations. This should be kept in mind in view of the present day trend to impose prohibitive taxes on chain stores as provided in Proposition 22 upon which people of California will vote in the election Nov. 3.

"If this so-called chain store tax is approved by the voters, the necessities of life—food, clothing, drugs, etc.—will increase in price, because chain stores will have to pass the added tax right on to the consumer.

"Another unfair feature of the proposition is that it singles out chain stores for excessive taxation, and excludes competing stores which do not happen to be members of incorporated chain organizations.

"I know that people of San Diego city and county, once they understand the dangers hidden in Proposition 22 will vote 'no'."

FORMER IOWAN GOOD AT GROWING THINGS

Bert Everist, former resident of Marshalltown Iowa, now residing at 4977 Cape May avenue, say he likes to grow things, so last spring planted 5c worth of water melon seed in his lot and from that planting has taken over seventy fine dark skinned melons weighing 15 to 40 pounds. In the final clean-up of the vines a few weeks go those under 15 lbs. were all thrown away.

Many friends shared a juicy melon from Bert's patch and the News office was grateful for the one left with us.

The Everist family dropped into Ocean Beach about a year ago in a tour of Southern California and while Mrs. Everist went to Iowa this summer to visit relatives, Mr. Everist stayed here where the weather was cool and comfortable.

JUST A CONTEMPTIBLE POLITICAL TRICK

A purported affidavit submitted by a disgruntled discharged employee to the present Grand Jury, a few days before election to discredit Mr. Hastings, is an old political trick that should react to his credit by the intelligent voters of his district.

Suffice it to say that there have been five Grand Juries in session, since the incident was supposed to have taken place, which brands the act as a direct attempt to discredit a candidate just before election.

GET ON THE JOB—and—GET IT DONE—
JEANETTE E. DALEY, Roosevelt Democratic Candidate for state assembly in the 78th district, is that kind of operator.
Her energy and knowledge of how big work can be done has placed her foremost as a construction contractor among business women of the nation.
She is equally informed in law and law-making, financing and the constructive needs of this community.
When you talk dredging the river channel through Mission bay flats to her, she understands exactly what you are talking about, and how it can be done.
She has no time for, nor sympathy with, legislative tactics, that block needed improvements instead of building them. She is energetically and intelligently interested in progress, instead of politics.
That is how she won her success after starting to work for herself at the age of 15. — It is how she expects to win success for her district, county and state in the legislature.
San Diego's wonderful Beach sections needs that kind of representation. They will get it by voting November 3 for
